EQUIPPING COMPASSIONATE AND COMMITTED
ADVENTIST CHAPLAINS IN WORLDWIDE MINISTRY

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Education, the media, international trade, and travel have shrunk our world. Globalization, specialization, and new technologies bring change and create demands for higher standards, including in the field of religious ministry. This is particularly true in rapidly developing regions of the world. Corporations, institutions, and private and public organizations engage chaplains as part of their leadership team. Religious leaders now serve as chaplains in airports, business and industry, education, community agencies, correctional institutions, health care facilities, the military, and other settings.

The Adventist Chaplaincy Ministries Department–General Conference (ACM) receives increasing numbers of appeals from the world church for help in establishing and developing chaplaincies. In collaboration with other denominational leaders and departments, ACM is providing strategic direction in response to these dynamics.

Adventist Chaplaincy Institute training programs are developed in collaboration with a variety of denominational entities, including administration and the education, health, and ministerial departments. This integrated approach will provide an array of educational opportunities to develop specialized ministry for denominational and public and private organizations.

ACI oversees collaborative denominational training programs for chaplaincy, assists Seventh-day Adventists seeking to enter the chaplaincies, and helps chaplains attain the highest professional standards. ACI seeks to inspire and develop called, competent, and caring chaplains who use their skills to perform or provide a compassionate and holistic ministry of grace, hope and healing to all those in their circles of influence. Chaplaincies provide a unique opportunity for Seventh-day Adventist ministers. While fulfilling their call from God, chaplains serve in places the church cannot easily enter.

The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists recognizes chaplaincy as a valid and viable ministry. In 1985, ACM was established as a General Conference service to develop the unified program, and in 1995 ACM was raised to the status of a full department with ACM directors in each of the world division offices. This growing network has led to the increasing demand for chaplaincy education and opened the way for ACI.

This is an exciting time for expanding the traditional view of ministry within the Seventh-day Adventist Church as we seek to bring glory to God and to His kingdom!

Mario E. Ceballos, D. Min., BCC
Adventist Chaplaincy Institute

Travel expenses for members will be paid by their employing organizations. Any other compensations will be considered when budgeted and on a contractual basis.

ACM PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS AND SERVICES

A variety of environments, conditions of governance, and legal requirements create considerable differences in chaplaincies. Differences also exist between chaplaincy institutional settings and the profile of ministry needed. Yet, the frequent crossing of ecclesiastical and national boundaries also requires a high standard of excellence that defines a commonality of skills acceptable throughout the denomination for endorsed Adventist chaplains. Recognition of attaining and practicing those skills is certified by ACI. That certification attests that the Adventist chaplain practices pastoral proficiencies to the highest professional standards and is qualified to minister anywhere within the global church (FA 35 10).

ACI provides the services listed below:

BOARD-CERTIFICATION

The certification process is initiated by the endorsed chaplain and is administered by ACI. This determines if a chaplain has completed the academic, clinical, and experiential requirements to be awarded board-certified status.

BOARD-CERTIFICATION OF ADVENTIST CLINICAL PASTORAL CARE SUPERVISORS

The certification process is initiated by the endorsed chaplain and is administered by ACI. This determines if an endorsed and certified chaplain further qualifies as an instructor of Adventist Clinical Pastoral Education.

ACCREDITATION OF ADVENTIST CLINICAL PASTORAL CARE EDUCATION TRAINING CENTERS

The accreditation process for the Adventist Clinical Pastoral Care Education (ACPCE) training centers is initiated by an Adventist CPE Supervisor and is administered by ACI. This determines if an ACPCE training center is operating to ACI standards and qualifies for accreditation.

ACADEMIC PARTNERSHIPS

ACI will work in partnership with and through Adventist graduate educational institutions to offer specialized chaplaincy training. These partnerships can be initiated either by ACI or the academic institutions. Currently, ACI has partnered with the Adventist University of Africa (AUA), Nairobi, Kenya, the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary at Andrews University (SDATS), Berrien Springs, Michigan, the School of Religion at Loma Linda University, Loma Linda, California (LLUSR), the Inter-American Adventist Theological Seminary (IATS) in Miami, Florida, and the Latin-American Adventist Theological Seminary (SALT) Brasilia, Brazil to offer advanced graduate courses and degrees.

DISTRIBUTED EDUCATION

The changing demographics of students and educational expenses associated with resident learning makes different modalities and delivery of training essential. ACI will work to provide non-resident, online education, and other alternative opportunities that still provide quality learning.

ACI CONTINUING EDUCATION

PROFESSIONAL CONTINUING EDUCATION UNITS (CEU)

Adventist chaplains are required to continue their professional education for a certain number of hours per year or to complete a specified number of professionally related CEUs. ACI will assist in providing or recommending opportunities for chaplains to complete some of the requirements. Board-certified chaplains will be required to take CEUs for maintaining their certification (FA 30 25).

PHILOSOPHY

Professional education is a lifetime activity. ACM is committed to ensuring that the chaplains they endorse and certify maintain a high level of professional competence. A primary method of encouraging that goal is to provide, facilitate, and require regular continuing education. ACI is a vehicle that can help a chaplain complete this requirement.

CRITERIA

Continuing education should meet the following criteria:

- A. Subjects are relevant to chaplains and chaplain ministry.
- B. Events directly relate to one or more of the “Core Competencies” listed earlier.
- C. Events may include workshops, seminars, lectures, or other professional activities that enhance one or more of the “Core Competencies.”
- D. Academically and professionally qualified instructors.
- E. Adequate verification of attendee engagement in the experience and evaluation of the event.

PROCEDURES FOR SCHEDULING AND DOCUMENTING CONTINUING EDUCATION

1. Application to receive ACI continuing education credits can be made by individual chaplains, organizations, or institutions.
2. Proposals to offer CEUs for credit will be sent to ACI in advance of the event to allow ACI adequate time for consideration, clarification if needed, and notification of decision before the event is advertised or begins.
3. ACI will send notice of their decision to the applicant. The notice will agree with the proposal, recommend modifications, or decline the proposal.

4. Verification of attendee engagement and evaluation of the event will be completed by the event coordinator through submission of pre- and post-tests, attendance records, or another ACI approved method. In the case of a chaplain attending a non-ACI sanctioned event, the chaplain will submit a post-event evaluation that includes a summary of the event and a description of “Core Competency” learning.

DEFINITION OF TERMS

ECCLESIASTICAL ENDORSEMENT

Ecclesiastical endorsement is a recognized status and process that verifies a faith group’s affirmation that a religious leader meets requirements and is qualified to serve in an institutional or organizational setting as a chaplain (FA 30 05).

The endorsement process for a Seventh-day Adventist Church minister is administered by the ACM Department of the applicant’s home division. This is a process solely administered by the ACM Committee.

Though endorsement is not the responsibility of ACI, as such, it is foundational to the Institute’s certifying and accrediting tasks.

CERTIFICATION

Certification is a process that validates compliance with standards and recognizes competency. Adventist Chaplaincy Ministries certifies certain division programs and Seventh-day Adventist ministers who have completed special training and achieved special skills.

ACCREDITATION

Accreditation verifies that a specified degree/diploma/certificate/educational training program is officially licensed and recognized by governmental agencies. It meets professional standards and adequately prepares a student for qualifying to enter a chaplaincy field (FA 35 05). Institutions or organizations and programs are accredited. The Board of Clinical Pastoral Education Accreditation (BCPE) determines accreditation of ACM-sponsored chaplain training programs.

SEVENTH-DAY
ADVENTIST

CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION (SDA-CPE)

EQUIPPING COMPASSIONATE AND COMMITTED
ADVENTIST CHAPLAINS IN WORLDWIDE MINISTRY

PREFACE

Seeing the need to establish worldwide standards for the training of Seventh-day Adventist chaplains, to foster the development of chaplaincy education programs, and to facilitate recognition of chaplaincy training around the world within Adventist institutions worldwide, the Adventist Chaplaincy Ministries-General Conference (ACM) committee has recommended that Adventist Chaplaincy Institute (ACI) develop standards for the Accreditation of Clinical Pastoral Education.

Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) is a supervised method of training pastors in a clinical setting through real-life ministry encounters. In 1925, Richard C. Cabot wrote an article promoting the use of CPE. Anton T. Boisen enlarged the concept to include a case study method of theological inquiry—a study of “living human documents.” William S. Keller began supervising theological students in case study methods, believing pastoral practice was complete only as it addressed contributing social conditions. As the role of CPE continued to develop, other leaders integrated knowledge from medicine, psychology, and other behavioral sciences into pastoral practice. (See www.ACPE.edu/WhoWeAreHistory.html)

Seventh-day Adventist Clinical Pastoral Education (SDA-CPE) was established in 2013. Although many Seventh-day Adventist chaplains have been trained by and affiliated with other organizations in some countries, the Seventh-day Adventist Church leadership felt the need to provide a Seventh-day Adventist-based certification of Adventist chaplains. They were also impressed with the need to provide the accreditation of centers of training around the world where there are no other professional organizations, or as an alternative for those, that due to conscience and or personal choice, prefer a recognition from the church. This would provide church-wide standards for the equipping of Adventist pastors to become clinical chaplains in order to serve the church in all of our church institutions, i.e. health care, educational institutions, and work centers, etc. Adventist pastors who have trained in an SDA-CPE training center would also be qualified to serve the church as chaplains in public settings that utilize chaplains, i.e. police, military, fire and rescue, airports, sports, etc.

SDA-CPE offers international Adventist standards for accreditation – endorsement of CPE Centers that operate in Adventist institutions, and they in turn offer clinical training as:

1. Theological education
2. Training for pastoral ministry
3. Training for institutional chaplaincy
4. Training for pastoral care and counseling
5. Training which leads to certification as a supervisor of clinical pastoral education
6. Training for other specialized ministries

Adventist colleges, universities, and theological schools grant academic credit for Clinical Pastoral Education according to the credit system of each school.

STANDARDS OF SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION (SDA-CPE)

PART ONE – INTRODUCTION

I. MISSION OF THE SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION (SDA-CPE)

The Adventist Chaplaincy Institute (ACI) is the accrediting and endorsing entity of the Adventist Chaplaincy Ministries Department-General Conference (ACM), which oversees the accreditation and or endorsing of Seventh-day Adventist Clinical Pastoral Educational Centers. It is committed to advancing experience-based theological education for Seventh-day Adventist ministers, and is open to diverse cultures, ethnic groups, and faith traditions. SDA-CPE establishes standards, certifies supervisors, and accredits or endorses centers to provide programs of Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) in varied settings. ACI-approved programs promote the integration of theology, personal history, faith tradition, and the behavioral sciences in the practice of spiritual care. CPE centers that are already certified by an ACM-recognized accrediting agency will be eligible for an endorsement as an SDA-CPE Center.

II. PHILOSOPHY FOR PROMULGATION OF STANDARDS

As a professional training program, ACI has the responsibility to the Adventist church to define standards of conduct for members and promulgate standards for education, certification, and accreditation in Clinical Pastoral Education. It also holds the responsibility of safeguarding the public and helping to assure quality education for, and competence of, practitioners.

These standards provide guidance and direction to SDA-CPE members as to what ACI has determined to be sound professional practice and in accordance with the teachings, cultural traditions, and beliefs of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. These standards are to be enforced through the peer processes duly adopted by SDA-CPE for that purpose. Neither the standards nor processes for accountability to them are designed to provide a basis for civil liability or judicatory processes in any other forum.

III. OBJECTIVES AND OUTCOMES OF SDA-CPE ACCREDITED PROGRAMS

CPE provides theological and professional education using the clinical method of learning in diverse contexts of ministry. SDA-CPE accredits two types of Clinical Pastoral Education programs: CPE (Level I/ Level II) and Supervisory CPE. SDA-CPE accredited programs provide a progressive learning experience through a two level curriculum. Level I curriculum outcomes must be satisfactorily addressed prior to admission to Level II. Completion of CPE (Level I/Level II) curriculum is prerequisite for admission to Supervisory CPE.

Objectives of CPE (Level I / Level II)

CPE (Level I / Level II) enables pastoral formation, pastoral competence, and pastoral reflection. Some CPE centers offer pastoral specialization(s) as part of their Level II curriculum.

CPE (Level I / Level II) objectives define the scope of the CPE (Level I/Level II) program curricula. Outcomes define the competencies to be developed by students as a result of participating in each of the programs.

The center designs its CPE (Level I/Level II) curriculum to facilitate the students' achievement of the following objectives.

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL ETHICS FOR SDA-CPE MEMBERS

Maintenance of high standards of ethical conduct is a responsibility shared by all SDA-CPE members and students.

Members agree to adhere to a standard of conduct consistent with the code of ethics established by ACI. Members are required to sign the Code of Ethics for Board-Certified Seventh-day Adventist Chaplains and to promptly provide notice to ACI any complaint of unethical or felonious conduct made against them in a civil, criminal, ecclesiastical, employment, or another professional organization's forum.

Any member may invoke an ethics, accreditation, or certification review process when a member's conduct, inside or outside their professional work involves an alleged abuse of power or authority, involves an alleged felony, or is the subject of civil action or discipline in another forum when any of these impinge upon the ability of a member to function effectively and credibly as a CPE supervisor, chaplain, or spiritual care provider.

PES105.5 Accurately describe program expectations, including time requirements, in the admissions process for CPE programs.

COMPLAINTS, STANDARD COM201

COM201.1 SDA-CPE encourages persons to work out concerns or grievances informally, face-to-face, and in a spirit of collegiality and mutual respect. If differences are not resolved, a complaint involving an alleged violation of the SDA-CPE ethical or educational standards may be filed with the ACI Administrative Council.

COM201.2 The ACI Administrative Council has final authority to determine whether violations of SDA-CPE ethical or professional standards have occurred, and to determine final disposition of complaints. The SDA-CPE Board may authorize the local ACM Committee to implement the procedures in collaboration with another organization.

COM201.3 The ACI Board has final authority to determine whether violations of SDA-CPE educational standards have occurred, and to determine final disposition of complaints.

STANDARDS FOR SDA-CPE ADVENTIST CENTER ACCREDITATION (ACA)

Adventist Chaplaincy Institute (ACI) establishes procedures and guidelines for granting and maintaining the accreditation of an SDA-CPE center and its programs.

The ACI Administrative Council has authority to take action on all accreditation matters, including the recommendation to grant, defer, deny, suspend, or withdraw accreditation for any center, subject to the SDA-CPE appeal process. ACM will have the authority and will act upon the recommendation of the ACI Administrative Council.

STANDARD ACA301, PLAN OF ACTION

ACA301.1 Describes the administrative structure and lines of authority within the center.

ACA301.2 Provides for compliance with SDA-CPE standards.

ACA301.3 Describes how commitments to students will be met in the event of substantial change within the institution or center.

ACA301.4 All SDA-CPE centers shall maintain compliance with SDA-CPE standards, reports, and procedures.

STANDARD ACA302, HUMAN RESOURCES

Provide at least the following components:

SEVENTH-DAY
ADVENTIST

CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION (SDA-CPE) CURRICULUM

EQUIPPING COMPASSIONATE AND COMMITTED
ADVENTIST CHAPLAINS IN WORLDWIDE MINISTRY

PHILOSOPHY OF SDA-CPE

Seventh-day Adventist Clinical Pastoral Education (SDA-CPE) believes that adults learn best when self-motivated and provided with appropriate setting and resources. SDA-CPE should be a methodology of experiential learning based on the action-reflection model. The purpose of this is to enable persons for ministry and to help equip them via theological education and continuing education. The acquisition of skills in pastoral care is important. However, the most important of all is the process of personal and professional self-awareness and growth in one's ministry.

SDA-CPE MODEL CURRICULUM

Through the integration of pastoral care with the human sciences, SDA-CPE enables theological reflection on the human condition in various settings around the world so that clearer avenues of ministry and spiritual care can be rendered. The program is designed to encourage and nurture one's professional and personal growth and develop pastoral care skills. SDA-CPE also integrates the behavioral and theological education for the spiritual care providers' use in their pastoral experiences and ministry to persons in their physical, emotional, spiritual, and social needs.

A Key Aspect of Our Mission at Adventist Chaplaincy Institute (ACI) is to offer professional clinical training to chaplains to provide whole person care to those who seek healing and to enhance the quality of life in the institutions where Adventist chaplains serve. Our commitment is to be recognized as one of the best Clinical Pastoral Education training programs by providing optimum quality of pastoral care certification to Adventist chaplains.

Our core values in the SDA-CPE training program are:

Compassion, Integrity, Respect, and Excellence.

OUR STRATEGIES ARE:

- To serve the Seventh-day Adventist Church worldwide through Clinical Pastoral Education.
- To enhance the satisfaction of those we serve, cost effectiveness, and community wellness in institutions where Adventist chaplains serve.
- To care for the needs of caregivers.
- To provide educational (all levels of SDA-CPE) and ministerial opportunities to hospital staff, local clergy, and seminarians.
- To foster professional and ministerial relationships within the Seventh-day Adventist Church, and with other faith communities, seminaries, and colleges.
- To journey with the trained and qualified individual towards chaplain certification.
- To reach out and educate Seventh-day Adventist pastors.

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST CLINICAL PASTORAL EDUCATION (SDA-CPE)

Clinical Pastoral Education is a method of theological education where chaplain-interns develop pastoral competency within the context of responsible relationships with people under the direct supervision of qualified chaplain instructors. The SDA-CPE program is centered within the context of total person care with dignity and compassion. Persons to whom we minister are “living human documents” from which learning transpires.

The program at the training center offers unique learning opportunities. It focuses on knowing, belonging, being, and doing ministry with built-in evaluation skills. The major contributions to the learners are in the development of self-evaluation skills that can be applied to personal and professional growth.

The SDA-CPE program is viewed as an educational process in which the chaplains in training and supervisory education students create their own learning objectives. The many relationships (which include patients, their families, hospital staff, peers, and supervisor) provide the crucible where the didactic, clinical, and interpersonal experiences are mixed together for both intensive and extended programs.

Therefore, the SDA-CPE process is an “action-reflection” model. It is experientially based, helping the intern to discover what he/she has learned, how the learning has taken place, and to what extent it can be helpful to the intern and others. Key elements to this process are observation, communication, networking, and modeling. The intern is encouraged to develop the skills of observation as an initial step and to reflect upon what has been observed in order to create his/her own style of ministering congruent with one’s personality, objectives, and desires. The potential for learning and teachable moments arise out of patient, family, or staff encounters, which involves oneself in ministering to the person in need.

Written assignments are excellent learning tools. These include assignments such as the verbatim, first impression paper, autobiography, learning contract, peer history, book report, theological reflections, pastoral and personal identity paper, and specific notes on critical incidents. Once completed, these assignments are evaluated, accepted as is, or returned for improvement.

All levels of the SDA-CPE program under the supervision of certified SDA-CPE supervisors/instructors require 400+ hours of training in each unit. The typical day includes activities such as devotions and prayer, patient and staff ministry, reports, group and interpersonal session, and verbatim sessions. Schedules are established by the SDA-CPE supervisor.

The process during the program follows five phases:

(a) Orientation (b) Assessment (c) Program (d) Evaluation (e) Termination.

A. Orientation Phase: During the first week, the intern learns about the hospital, staff, and generally gets acquainted with the place of ministry. In addition, he/she is oriented to the expectation and guidelines of the SDA-CPE program and evaluation process. The intern also receives computer training for reporting and is involved in individual supervisory sessions, group seminars, and group dynamic sessions.

B. The Assessment Phase: During the assessment phase, the intern determines the needs of the patient care units to be covered and then makes an assessment of his/her ability and skill to meet the needs. This involves understanding what pastoral needs are present and how they might best be addressed. This period takes a couple of weeks and may involve specific objectives, and a written contract between the intern and the supervisor.

- C. The Program Phase: During this period, interns are encouraged to initiate and develop their program for ministry. This may involve using resources that have been discovered during orientation or the assessment phase. Reliance on self, peers, and the supervisor is encouraged.
- D. Evaluation Phase: This phase begins at the six-week evaluation report, and continues through the last two weeks. All the work and learning is evaluated in perspective of the total SDA-CPE experience.
- E. Termination Phase: Appropriate farewells to patients, staff, peers, and the supervisors may culminate in a grieving process during this phase.

LECTURES (DIDACTICS) AND DISCUSSIONS:

The lectures and discussions allow for a progression of material from the specific issues and concerns raised by the interns to the broader issues of pastoral care. Lectures present material about ministry to specific people, and specific illnesses, to broader issues of sexuality, race, gender, and spirituality.

A number of sessions deal with areas in psychology and pastoral care. Several lectures will be dedicated to personality development, theories of learning, and the psychology of religion.

The intern is encouraged to learn as much as he/she can in the SDA-CPE program. On the first day, the interns of all levels of the SDA-CPE program, including supervisory education students, write a statement of objectives and a learning contract. These are used as guideposts. These individual objectives are reviewed, assessed, and restated as the program progresses. Each student takes on as much responsibility as is appropriate, while his or her work is reviewed during the weekly supervisory sessions. Each intern is encouraged to set his/her own pace and work with ongoing support and feedback from their peers and supervisors. Individuality, cooperation, and teamwork are integral parts of the total learning experience.

The use of learning objectives and available resources is very consistent with the present direction of theological education, and show how this program is relevant for professional education. Interns will see that all experiences are valuable. This includes those that seem to be failures. When the intern recognizes these as resources of learning, realistic, practical, and insightful understanding about pastoral care can evolve.

The hope is that insights gained in this learning setting will be helpful in continuing and supporting effective pastoral care in the future, regardless of the setting in which the chaplain will eventually minister. The development of an attitude of commitment to learning is a key outcome of this type of professional education. The development of a practical theology, including the application of the student's spiritual and religious resources, will evolve throughout the process of supervised learning and heritage.

During the process of group seminars and dynamics, issues such as the following are covered: Impression and expectations of the SDA-CPE program, individual objectives for the program, the call to ministry, personal and peer history, parental and family figures, ministry to patients, special issues (such as grief, fear, anxiety, death, etc.), pastoral and professional identity, interpersonal relationships, plans for the future, and so on. The learning process is punctuated by mid-term evaluations and contracts for learning personal, peer life history, personal history, revision of learning contracts, and concludes with the final evaluation before moving on.

LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES RELATE TO THE SDA-CPE OBJECTIVES

A. THE PASTOR AND HIS/HER MINISTRY:

Since the intern is “the chaplain-in-training” or “Supervisory Education Student” on the patient floor, one becomes more aware of how one feels with that title, and how people relate to a pastor. The intern discovers what issues the patient might raise when they hear the title “chaplain.” The patient more readily raises issues of religious faith, feelings about the church, about God, about eternal life, pain, and suffering.

On the contrary, a patient or staff may be angry with the church, with a former pastor, or with God. One learns how important one’s ministry is, and that one can often be ministered to, as well as ministering to others. The intern learns different images of a pastor, such as the roles of preaching, teaching, healing, and counseling.

B. CLINICAL METHOD OF LEARNING:

The intern ministers at the “bedside” of the patient and learns to face “real” issues, often having to overcome unknown and unresolved issues in the student’s own dynamics.

The intern develops skills in speaking, praying, listening, appropriate touching, and responding with the patient about varied issues that lead to understanding oneself better. This, in turn, leads to a relevant approach to every patient. With this method, the intern discovers the values and importance of writing down, verbally reporting, and seeking feedback and then being able to choose the best way of relating.

C. THE VALUE OF A PEER GROUP:

The intern learns to utilize peers for support, confrontation, and clarification in a way that will assist one to integrate personal attributes into pastoral functioning. From the very first day in the peer group, interns begin the process of sharing, trusting, and acceptance, upon which all future sharing and learning will be built. In the group seminars, the student will look at verbatims seeking to share completely their weaknesses and strengths, and to become open to one another for options and advice.

In the group dynamics, the examination of one’s relationship to parents, siblings, and others, along with issues that impact relationships such as sexuality, will encourage the intern to better understand him/herself. This encourages others to share their own experiences, thus leading to growth. True care and concern encourages peers to tell how they really feel about one another, showing where changes will benefit the person, or where one doesn’t need to change. As the student feels worthy and loved, then he/she begins to show love to others as well.

Through role-playing one can observe how one would probably act in a similar situation, and can often “bring out” hidden feelings towards people. Once out in the open, integration can take place.

The immediate feedback that is given will reinforce and strengthen the persona as an individual and as a pastor, or will confront part of one’s personality that needs to be dealt with. This also aids in enhancing the person’s ability to relate to others.

D. SUPERVISION AND EVALUATION:

The intern will learn to use individual supervision for the person, professional growth, and for developing the capacity to evaluate one’s ministry. The individual session is at least one hour a week, during which a significant, meaningful, and caring relationship is usually developed. There is the opportunity, once trust is built, to clarify any question or confusion, and receive guidance in a meaningful and productive direction.

Respect and trust of the supervisor often leads to the sharing or a confession of an inner secret or pain, which once shared and seen in a better perspective, leads to the healing process.

Through this supervision, an individual contract for learning is developed, with specific objectives and objectives put forward. These serve as guideposts as each objective is accomplished and recognized. The objective of the supervisor gives an additional yardstick against which the intern can evaluate his/her skills and performance as a pastor in a clinical setting. This is equally true for all levels of SDA-CPE interns.

The intern writes up each supervisory session, and shares it with the supervisor. This is an opportunity for the supervisor to see if what was said was really heard. This is very important since the relationship is often reflected in the way the intern relates to the patients. One looks at the “problem about learning” that occurs between the student and supervisor, and also at the learning problem which occurs between the student and the patient.

E. THEOLOGY AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES:

The intern learns to increase theological understanding of issues arising from experience and to enhance the interface between theology and behavioral sciences in understanding the human conditions.

The intern learns to:

1. Hear when a patient raises issues of God in their life, and is able to respond appropriately.
2. Become familiar with the Scriptures, the use of prayer in his/her own life, and be aware of one’s own spiritual journey.
3. Only then can an intern really share oneself, and thus be able to listen to the patient’s deeper concern. The intern needs to grapple with personal feelings about suffering, eternal life, hope, incarnation, and ministry of caring and the concept of God, Jesus, and the Holy Spirit.

F. ATTITUDES, VALUES, AND ASSUMPTIONS:

The intern learns how one’s attitudes, values, and assumptions affect one’s ministry. The intern must be “in touch” with their own feelings. Feelings of “better than another,” of being angry, of being depressed, of being judgmental, and of projecting these feelings onto the patient can get in the way of ministry and need to be addressed. The intern must be aware of “down” feelings and be able to label them, as well as allowing the patient to express their feelings, without “jumping to a conclusion or judgment” too quickly. The ability to listen to what someone is really saying is a primary first step in relating to that person. The intern must also be open and willing to learn and relate fully. This means change, and to change is to risk.

METHODOLOGY

At the successful completion of the training program (four (4) units minimum), interns will receive a certificate of completion, and for Supervisor-in-Training (SIT) training (two (2) units of supervisory minimum), a certificate of completion of SDA-CPE Supervisory training. The structure of the program, including the SIT program, requires 400 hours of supervised ministry; this constitutes one unit or one quarter of SDA-CPE. Two units of SDA-CPE, a total of 800 hours of supervised ministry beyond the first four (4) units of SDA-CPE are required to appear before the ACM Supervisory Level Committee. The certification interview might be held in person or via videoconference.

The programs function out of the action-reflection model of learning, with its primary purpose on learning issues for the interns, so they may look closely at their own personal and professional functioning in a variety of settings. A students’ handbook will be provided to each intern as their learning guide.

There are two major types of methods. One is individual and the other is through the group process.

A. THE INDIVIDUAL METHOD:

The intern learns through methods that are determined by one’s readiness for learning, interest, motivation, and the level at which one is functioning. The primary time to learn is between the intern and the patient. For the SIT, it occurs between him/her and his/her supervisor, and then in the one-on-one supervisory setting, during which pastoral experience is discussed and examined. Objectives which are determined during the first week are chosen and planned. The primary way of learning is to write out what one thinks and feels. Examples of written reports include verbatim reports, book reports, personal life history, peer study, critical incident reports, summary reports, theological reflection reports, summary reports of supervisory sessions, and evaluation reports.

The verbatim reports number five to seven pages in length and provide clinical material to be used for personal reflection, as well as during group seminar sessions. They are the primary tools used in examining the ability of the intern to plan, listen, observe, and respond in a ministry to sociological, psychological, or theological areas. The intern also analyzes one’s own plans for the next verbatim.

Book reports are chosen and assigned to help the intern learn more about an interest or area of concern in his/her ministry at the hospital. The intern can compare one’s own experience with that of another writer, and then incorporate any learning to enhance his/her own ministry.

Personal life history is a three-part autobiography, which helps the intern review his/her personal growth, development, and dynamics. Each part is done in stages and covers age birth to 12, age 13 to 19, and age 20 to present time.

Peer Study is done with another intern. This allows the intern to see how others really see them. It gives a more objective review of one's life, and provides feedback from a peer who has come to know that intern as a total person.

Contract for learning is established in the first week between the intern and supervisor to set specific objectives and objectives for the individual intern. This is constantly reviewed and revised. It provides a yardstick to evaluate progress and growth.

Summary report of each supervisory session helps the intern see and review issues of concern, and also for the supervisor to determine whether the intern is hearing what is discussed.

Position paper is an important requirement for the SIT. During his/her supervisory training process the intern is guided to write a position paper in three areas on personality theory, theological position, and education theory.

Reflection reports are assigned to look more closely at a relationship or a specific experience. They may include verbatim, group dynamic, didactic, SDA-CPE admission interviews, SDA-CPE faculty meetings, staff meetings, and first impression paper of the program, sociograms, and town hall meetings.

Evaluations are written in the middle of, and then at the end of the program. These cover several specific areas, such as the intern's relationship to peers, supervisor, patients, their families, and staff on their theological, sociological, psychological, and spiritual concerns. The focus of the evaluation would be areas of stress and confidence, areas of strength and weaknesses in both personal and professional areas, suggestions for the intern's future, and for the program's future. There is a daily verbal evaluation. This is a time of reflection in the group process and in the individual supervisory sessions.

Most learning takes place when a person verbalizes and writes out their thoughts and feelings in an area. Personal reflection and allowing others to reflect and respond to specific issues is helpful in incorporating or rejecting ideas, feelings, or thoughts.

B. THE GROUP METHOD AND VERBATIM SESSION

The intern learns through the method of group activity and supervision in this process. This includes group seminars, group dynamics, chapel services, field trips, lectures, and evaluation sessions. The small peer group meets daily with 3-6 interns, in the morning for verbatim sessions and in the afternoon for the group dynamic sessions. The verbatim session is the primary teaching tool for the action-reflection model. Each intern takes turns presenting his/her own verbatim. The SIT determines the rotation based on issues, and also provides opportunities for each intern to share. During this session, role-playing is also often used to provide as realistic a setting as possible.

The Group Dynamic session primarily gives opportunity to continue with an earlier issue, and to provide learning experiences in interpersonal relationships in a supervisor setting. Many feelings, attitudes, values, and beliefs are shared. Personal and professional issues are looked at as each intern relates to another. Increased participation helps the intern expand one's awareness in becoming more resourceful in ministering to others. Opportunity to minister, and to be ministered to, is a valuable tool here.

Daily worship services are held in the group at the beginning of each session. As all join together to praise God, read Scriptures, sing, pray, and listen to a devotional message, a spirit of fellowship and unity is developed. Each intern is provided an opportunity to lead a service and share in the collective experience of worshipping God.

Didactic/lectures are given 3-5 times in a unit by the supervisor, SIT, guest speakers, and staff from the specialty areas within the hospital. Some of the areas that are dealt with include pastoral identity, history of SDA-CPE, the action-reflection model of learning, death and dying, grief, personality development, spirituality, ministry to alcoholics and drug addicts, domestic abuse, mental illness, etc. Questions and answers are encouraged and often the small group follows up with a discussion and reflection on what was presented.

Through these methods, the intern forms and develops one's personal identity, professional skills, and personal growth. The supervisor, as well as the SIT, uses appropriate methods of supervision to support, confront, challenge, and guide each intern towards learning about objectives articulated in the learning contract. Intern involvement in planning, learning the context, and programming objectives is encouraged.

The basic structure of the program is designed by former experiences, and some limits may be redesigned, but beyond that, the interns are constantly encouraged to create and initiate as much as possible. They are to seek and fully understand the meaning and value of every part of the SDA-CPE process. Questions are encouraged, and clarification and understanding, by any means, is supported. In fact, the intern has the majority of control over what one says and does, and is asked to be responsible and accountable for what is said or done. For example, a theme or issue is suggested, but what and how it is developed comes from the interns themselves. The supervisor or SIT guides and directs the process to make maximum use of the time at hand.

The lectures and seminar issues have evolved from previous SDA-CPE experiences, and the interns in their evaluation have given suggestions and comments. The design of the program has come from feedback on previous programs. The present interns will also have the opportunity to make suggestions for future programs. Every Friday, interns reflect on the week's work. In this manner, objectives are made, and then carried out through the following week.

In the area of worship, the assigned intern plans and leads both the morning and the noon services. Thus, the intern is given the opportunity to introduce his/her own resources, faith traditions, and creativity in this area of the program.

How does the program prepare the intern to assume an increased level of responsibility for selecting and organizing learning resources?

Once the intern is oriented to the hospital and the objectives of the program, one is expected to be a chaplain and take the initiative in developing and implementing the objectives for learning. If an intern is unsure about something, consulting with either the supervisor, the SIT, or the peer group is helpful in arriving at a solution. The intern is encouraged to make decisions, then take appropriate action and follow through.

The intern is given increased responsibility in visiting sick patients and relating to the staff. This allows him/her to become more confident in his/her own ministry. There is no expectation for the interns to handle responsibilities beyond their level of functioning.

Issues discussed in the supervisory conferences, either with the senior supervisor or SIT is the responsibility of the intern. Usually, there is a dependence upon the supervisor, but this soon develops into independence, and ultimately, interdependency. This growing maturity comes from the intern's own evaluations and the clarification of one's own learning issues.

Weekly impression reports and evaluations provide a sense of perspective of where one has come from and where one would like to be. This helps put the learning objectives into very specific terms, and thus the intern is motivated to invest oneself more fully in their own learning program.

Towards the end of the program, each intern is given several opportunities to lead in the peer group session as well as attend and participate in floor staff meetings. One's pastoral and professional identity becomes stronger as the intern sees oneself as pastor.

2. Individual and group supervision by a certified supervisor.
3. A written contract of covenant of learning developed cooperatively between interns and supervisor of the SDA-CPE center.
4. Active participation of students in a small peer group, which would be large enough to enable interns to experience a variety of relationships, providing time and space for each to enter into creative interpersonal dynamics and constructive criticism.
5. Presentation of theoretical material appropriate for understanding the particular needs of persons to whom interns minister, and a variety of sources such as theology, the behavioral sciences, sociology, and pastoral care.
6. Full use of seminars, workshops, case study presentations, and didactic presentations designed to assist interns in integrating theological understanding and knowledge of behavioral sciences into their personal functioning.

1. To become more aware of oneself as a pastor and aware of the ways that one's ministry affects other persons.
2. To develop and understand the ability to utilize the clinical methods of learning.
3. To develop the ability to utilize the peer group for feedback, support, confrontation, and clarification in a way that will assist one to integrate personal attributes into pastoral functioning.
4. To use individual supervision of one-on-one levels, as well as in the clinical setting, for personal and professional growth. The supervision will help interns in a variety of ways, enabling them to develop a capacity to evaluate their ministry.
5. To increase theological understanding of issues arising from experience and to enhance the interface between theology and the behavioral sciences in understanding the human condition.
6. To get in touch with one's feelings, attributes, assumptions, and values, and understand how they affect one's ministry.
7. Be aware of the social conditions in one's life as well as others and how those conditions impact one's ministry.
8. The life experience interns carry from their family of origin and the impact of this on one's ministry.

LEVEL 2 SDA-CPE

Based upon the Level 1, SDA-CPE experience, Level 2, SDA-CPE facilitates a higher level of pastoral formation and ministerial development. Level 2 SDA-CPE calls for specialization of persons who desire preparation for a ministry specialty such as chaplaincy, pastoral counseling, ministry to elderly people, addiction unit, emergency department (ED), intensive care unit (ICU), oncology, prison ministry, and ministry in other clinical settings.

STANDARDS FOR LEVEL 2 SDA-CPE

1. This calls for an intern's intensive and extensive involvement in pastoral care encounters in the chosen specialty area.
2. Participation of interns in management function and in the examination and evaluation of pastoral and theological implications of those functions.
3. Observation, recording, and reporting of pastoral ministry.
4. Interns participate in a peer group that is large enough to enable an intern to experience a variety of relationships. At the same time, it is small enough to provide time and space for each student to enter into a creative interpersonal process for learning.
5. Individual supervision by an SDA-CPE supervisor.
6. Didactic instruction and use of literature to provide understanding of the client/patient parishioner's existential predicament and specific crisis from a theological-pastoral and scientific perspective. Understanding of the various modes of helping a person in the specific clinical setting. Understanding of leadership styles and principles of management.

7. A clear definition of any chosen area of specialization.
8. Seminars and supervision appropriate to the clinical setting and the intern's individual contract for learning with a view toward helping the intern integrate theological understanding and knowledge of behavioral sciences with emphasis on pastoral functioning.
9. Specific curriculum developed through consultation with the student, which takes into account the intern's interest and the unique resources of the SDA-CPE center
10. The use of interdisciplinary resource persons.

Additional standards of any chosen area of specialization are:

- Supervision by persons who are competent in the specialized area
- Didactic instruction in the specialized area

OBJECTIVES OF LEVEL 2 SDA-CPE

The objective of advanced SDA-CPE is to develop a professional competence in ministry and/or professional competence in a ministry specialty of one's chosen area. The specific objectives of Advanced SDA-CPE are:

1. To develop the ability to make optimum use of one's religious heritage, theological understanding, and knowledge of behavioral sciences in ministry to persons and groups.
2. To acquire self-knowledge to a degree that permits pastoral care to be offered within the strengths and limitations of one's own person.
3. To develop the ability to work as a pastoral member of an interdisciplinary team.
4. To develop the capacity to utilize one's pastoral perspective and pastoral competence in a variety of functions, such as preaching, teaching, and administration, as well as pastoral care and pastoral counseling.

- Ability to articulate the meaning of the ministry specialty
- Development of pastoral competence in the area of specialization

CURRICULUM FOR SUPERVISOR-IN-TRAINING (SIT)

Supervisory SDA-CPE continues the work begun in the advanced program and presupposes completion of the objectives for Level 2, SDA-CPE, as well as appropriate certification/education stated in ACM standards for SDA-CPE supervisory training. It is assumed that most persons entering supervisory training are seeking certification as a Seventh-day Adventist CPE supervisor. Supervisory SDA-CPE finds its place in the general educational model. Supervisory, along with Level 2, is at the second stage of the learning educational model. The objective is for interns to begin formulating their own model as they learn the constraints imposed on them by the setting, the interns, their own assumptions, and their own theoretical and practical limits.

The curriculum is developmental and interactive, assuming an adult learning status for the supervisory SDA-CPE student. The beginning point of learning the covenant is just as important as in other levels of SDA-CPE. Grounded in the objectives for supervisory SDA-CPE, the SIT is expected to negotiate specific/concrete objectives for his/her learning, taking into account a previous covenant, evaluations, learning, experiences, degree work, etc. The supervisory SDA-CPE intern is expected to begin with sufficient knowledge of the institution and the program of first unit interns. This will enable them to participate professionally, maintaining tension between the ministry to patients and the learning needs of interns.

Various test instruments and descriptive tools are used to help develop supervisory competence. Among these are:

1. Myers–Briggs Type Indicator
2. The Learning Inventory (by Dr. Benjamin Bogia)
3. The family of origin inventory
4. Drawing genogram & looking at the family dynamics
5. The Kiersey Temperament Sorter
6. The Pastoral Counseling Response Scale

The specific areas to provide a clinical lab for SIT are:

1. Verbatim session.
2. Group dynamic sessions.
3. Individual supervision.
4. Group supervision.
5. SIT are required to attend an SDA-CPE interview and present a report.
6. SIT are required to attend an SDA-CPE faculty meeting.
7. SIT are required to attend staff meetings.

METHODOLOGY FOR SUPERVISORY TRAINING

Interns who are admitted into the SIT program are then involved in the planning and implementation of the program in which they will be supervising. This includes selecting and scheduling didactic sessions for the first unit of SDA-CPE interns, preparing and delivering some of these sessions, and participating in the scheduling of experiences, and discussion around the rationale for each experience.

Interviews: The SIT participates in the admission interviews of first unit SDA-CPE interns, formulating questions based on the intern's submitted materials. They also take the interviewing interns on the hospital tour and host him/her informally during his/her time in the institution. They then discuss their impressions with the other members of the interviewing team as a decision is being made about the intern's admission. Rationale for options/judgments is elicited and concrete examples are expected to illustrate this decision.

Orientation Process: The beginning of the SDA-CPE unit is always a time of anxiety, and for the SIT, this is no exception. It is expected that the SIT will use his/her anxiety in helping to formulate and orchestrate the period of orientation for the interns, offering presentations, explorations, debriefing groups, group building, etc.

Verbatim sessions: The SIT leads some verbatim sessions on a daily basis, reading the presenting verbatim prior to the session, and preparing the appropriate parts of the verbatim supervision form.

After the session, the form is completed and submitted to the senior supervisor with the verbatim for review and comments. Daily pastoral care log sheets are maintained.

Group Supervision: Following the session, the group supervision form is filled and both are shared with the senior supervisor and SIT peer group with properly signed consent forms. An additional tool and the participation checklist are sometimes used as an interns' review video sessions. This helps understand group behavior. This is also reviewed with the senior supervisor.

Individual Supervision: Each supervisory education student spends an hour per week supervising his/her interns individually, using the individual supervision form.

Staff Consultation: The SIT is responsible for consultations with the staff members of other disciplines on each unit to which basic SDA-CPE interns are assigned. These consultations are to keep in touch, assist interns, and maintain relationships, etc. The importance of this relationship cannot be overstated. The SIT's work with other professionals in a team relationship contributes to the supervisory process and to the SDA-CPE interns, whose work is the pastoral ministry on the unit.

Importance of Day-to-Day Dialogue with SITs Senior Supervisor: Each SIT has his/her own supervisor, with whom he/she consults on an ongoing daily basis. Regular supervision of individual, verbatim sessions, and group work is effected through meetings, written comments, and discussion of the required forms, and informal consultations. Staff meetings are held once a week at which the SIT presents an aspect of their work to their peers with a review of mutual learning. Didactic meetings are held as time permits. During these sessions, theory is presented and discussed as each SIT in his/her peer group makes presentations. As much as possible, the SIT's peer group is held accountable to deal with interpersonal, pastoral, theological, and educational concerns. The process of supervisory sessions with the SIT is held several times during each unit to review normal events in the supervisory process, to alert the SIT to these events, to discuss issues related to them, and to debrief events related to them.

Learning Contract: Each SIT is required to write a learning contract and discuss it with his/her senior supervisor.

Evaluation Reports: Each SIT writes an initial draft of the mid-term and final evaluation of the intern assigned to him/her. The supervisor will review these drafts and give his/her feedback. Final draft of each is discussed with the SDA-CPE interns, and this process is then subject to be reviewed by the senior supervisor. Evaluation of the program forms are completed by each SDA-CPE intern and given to the SIT. These are reviewed and discussed in a final peer session to evaluate the entire SDA-CPE unit. The SIT's own evaluative work is completed with his/her senior supervisor and with the peer group. The evaluations are then shared, discussed, and signed.

SIT's Training Period: It is recommended that the SIT completes a minimum of two (2) CPE supervisory units (800 hours of training) before he/she is eligible to meet the committee for the next level of supervisory training, i.e. candidate and full supervisor. The SIT will be expected to:

1. Attend CPE interviews.
2. Attend all staff meetings.
3. Attend the CPE faculty meeting.
4. Help assist in CPE orientation.

5. Assist in making a daily devotional calendar for the unit.
6. Assist in creating an on-call calendar each month.
7. Required to attend all didactic presentations.
8. Write a learning contract.
9. Prepare a student handbook for the program.
10. Help prepare interns' individual files and store them in a secure filing cabinet.
11. Help interns settle down in their clinical settings.
12. Meet with supervisor one-on-one as assigned.
13. Required reading.
14. Theological reflection paper (as assigned).

Besides the previous specific assignments, the SIT will be a silent observer for a period of time as determined by the supervisor and will do the following:

- a. Write a report on each group dynamic session.
- b. Write a report on staff meetings.
- c. Write a report on CPE faculty meeting reports.
- d. Write a report on the CPE interview process.
- e. Write theological reflection reports (as assigned).
- f. Submit a weekly supervisory conference report.
- g. Submit a group supervision reflection report.
- h. Submit a verbatim session reflection report.
- i. Submit the SIT learning contract.
- j. Submit a weekly highlights report & supervisory agenda (as assigned).

All of the above is to the discretion of the supervisor.

ACI CONTINUING EDUCATION

PROFESSIONAL CONTINUING EDUCATION UNITS (CEU)

Adventist chaplains are required to continue their professional education so many hours per year or to complete a specified number of professionally related CEUs. ACI will assist in providing or recommending opportunities for chaplains to complete some of the requirements. Board-Certified

Chaplains will be required to take CEU education for maintaining their certification (FA 30 25).

PHILOSOPHY

Professional education is a lifetime activity. ACM is committed to ensuring that the chaplains they endorse and certify maintain a high level of professional competence. A primary method of encouraging that objective is to provide, facilitate, and require regular continuing education. ACI is a vehicle that can help a chaplain complete this requirement.

CRITERIA

Continuing education learning should meet the following criteria:

- A. Subjects are relevant to chaplains and chaplaincy ministry.
- B. Events directly relate to one or more of the “Core Competencies” listed previously.
- C. Events may include workshops, seminars, lectures, or other professional activities that enhance one or more of the “Core Competencies.”
- D. Academically and professionally qualified instructors.
- E. Adequate verification of attendee engagement in the experience and evaluation of the event.
